Chapter 1 by intellikat

Once upon a time there were two lovers. They had met at university, in an intro to Sociology course. Long yet furtive glances across the lecture hall, notes passed in the library, trays clattering together in the cafeteria, and then bodies clattering together in the underclassman dorm. It was an electrifying and unexpected romance, and yet the two were perfectly suited for one another.

Unfortunately, the news came to them in their senior year.

Chapter 2 by Haley Covington

Suddenly, she died. Also, there was a clown with severe diarrhoea who kept winking at him from across the room.

He couldn't believe she was gone. Ever since they really first met he had suspected something was wrong with her but refused to believe it. The man turned away from the clown and left, waiting for something, anything to appear as a sign something was going right with his world.

Chapter 4 by Lenya

He slammed the bottle down on the sink's counter top and swore. He wanted to be gone so badly, but knowing she would be disappointed in him was stronger. He ran a hand through his hair. What should he do? He missed her, he wanted her back, but that wouldn't happen. So what could he do?
